When Hampton University students graduate, they are prepared to demonstrate their ability to perform, achieve and excel. Through academic excellence our students maximize their intellectual capabilities and skills to become effective leaders and responsible citizens of their communities and the world.

Rhodes Scholar Finalist

JEFFREY EUGENE was the Class of 2011 valedictorian. During his senior year at HU he served as that class' Student Government Association president. While at HU, he helped coordinate several events, including World AIDS Day at HU, participated in the university's Men's Caucus and was inducted into the HU Honors College. NewsOne.com recognized Eugene as one of the best and brightest black students of 2011. He currently attends the Morehouse School of Medicine in Atlanta, Georgia. "I am still reaping the benefits of having attended Hampton University," Eugene said. "Along with its historical namesake, HU has all the right ingredients to produce students qualified to compete and excel in the workforce. I hope to bring that type of recognition to my alma mater." Maturing into a productive adult is a way of life at Hampton. The University's character building focus shapes students into real-life leaders in the here and now.

Aspiring Doctor of Physical Therapy

DESIREE WILLIAMS was a member of the William R. Harvey Leadership Institute, and earned her degree in Health, Physical Education and Recreation. She is currently enrolled in HU's Doctorate of Physical Therapy (DPT) program. Williams, Miss Hampton University 2010-11, was voted one of the top 10 Historically Black College and University (HBCU) queens by Ebony magazine. In that contest, she received more votes than any other HBCU queen. "At HU, I gained what I needed in every aspect of my life. The educational opportunities I've been afforded, along with joining the sisterhood of Miss Hampton, have been limitless," Williams said. "As I begin my next educational path at HU, I'm looking forward to learning, growing and being exposed to even more."

2012 Marshall Scholar Recipient

KENDYL CRAWLEY-CRAWFORD is a Hampton University Senior who received the Marshall Scholarship, one of the most prestigious post-graduate scholarships offered to American students by the United Kingdom. Up to 40 scholars are selected each year at the graduate level, and are funded to study at any institution in the United Kingdom. Up to 40 scholars are selected each year at the graduate level — they are future leaders that are expected to strengthen the relationship between the British and American people. After acceptance to the University College of London in London, Crawley-Crawford will enroll in the Environment, Science and Society MSc degree program. Crawley-Crawford has a 3.9 GPA and is involved in many research activities related to marine fisheries and environmental conservation. "It is such an honor to have won the scholarship. I am really excited," said Crawley-Crawford. "I think it is very important to understand all cultures."

Promising Young Architect

MARCUS THOMAS an Architecture Major, is making his mark on campus, and internationally as a Hamptonian. Thomas traveled to Italy this year with other HU architecture students, as part of the major's requirement to study abroad. On the trip, students visited historical landmarks, sketched and observed the culture. "In Italy, where architecture is so prominent, to see buildings we talk about in our architectural history class was a thrill," he said. "To see the Vatican and the Duomo come to life before my eyes was a surreal experience." Long-term, Thomas wants to earn his MBA, become a registered architect and do architectural work in low income communities. On campus, Thomas is president of the HU Student Recruitment Team (SRT). The student led group gives tours and coordinates events that offer prospective Hamptonians a social and academic picture of college life at the university. "Being able to help someone make a decision that will impact his or her life based on my experiences, has helped me grow as an individual," Thomas said. "Since attending HU, my greatest successes have been getting involved on and off campus, as well as sharing my Hampton experience to those prospective students who may be on the fence about attending Hampton, or even going to college in general."

Future Governor of North Carolina

KENDAL McBROOM was the Hampton University Class of 2014's freshman and sophomore class president. He is a member of the Greer Dawson Wilson Student Leadership Program and the HU Pulpit Ministry. "My greatest success and achievement thus far at Hampton has been the growth that I have experienced in myself, between last year and the current school year," McBroom said. "There is a completely new thirst for knowledge and learning that I have acquired, and it has been truly amazing." McBroom aspires to be elected as governor of North Carolina, his home state.

Harvard Law Student

MELISSA CHASTANG salutatorian of HU 2011, said it was her biggest academic achievement. "Having the opportunity to be recognized during commencement before all of my friends, family and classmates is something that I will never forget. Chastang, a Mobile, Alabama native, was a member of Sigma Tau Delta, the English Honor Society, and served as the organization's president during her senior year. She is a graduate of the Honors College, the William R. Harvey Leadership Institute, and tutored in the English Department's writing and technology lab her junior and senior years. She held memberships with Phi Alpha Delta Pre-Law Fraternity and Golden Key Honor Society. Chastang accomplished much at her Home by the Sea, and is now a Harvard Law School Juris Doctor candidate. "I made some amazing friends at Hampton and we've had great times together whether at a party, in a dorm room, or in a classroom, and I know that the friendships will endure."
